WHAT WE DO

We bridge the gap between science and the yachting community to advance oceanographic research, marine conservation, and education. By partnering with boat owners, we provide vessels that support scientists in conducting critical research and gathering data at sea. We also collaborate with educators to create immersive floating classroom experiences that inspire the next generation of ocean stewards.

> 1998

The International SeaKeepers Society was conceived in 1997, and was officially established in 1998 in Monaco by six yacht owners who were drawn to the notion of “turning yachts into research platforms.”

> 2001

Five yacht owners - among them Paul Allen, the Microsoft millionaire who owned “Medusa” among other yachts - collected oceanic and atmospheric data using a data collection device called the SeaKeeper 1000.

> 2004

Dr. Sylvia A. Earle and Jean-Michel Cousteau join the Scientific Advisory Board to identify key areas where vessels could support oceanographic research.

> 2012

SeaKeepers expands its scope by launching the “Scientific Vessel of Opportunity Program (SVOP)” encouraging yachts to host prominent scientists on missions aboard their vessels.

> 2014

The SVOP concept evolves into the DISCOVERY Program, the primary initiative for accomplishing scientist-led expeditions, citizen science, educational outreach, and community engagement.

> 2015

Board Member, Julian Chang, establishes a presence in Asia with its first international chapter, SeaKeepers Asia, based in Singapore.

> 2021

The second international chapter was established in the United Kingdom to foster relationships across Europe and expand programming in that region.

> 2023

Education increases as a central focus of SeaKeepers' mission, enabling a greater emphasis on student engagement and teacher development.

The third international chapter was established in the South Pacific, with headquarters in Auckland, New Zealand.

SeaKeepers celebrates 25 years of ocean conservation.

> 2024

The International SeaKeepers Society continues its expansion with the official launch of its Bangladesh chapter, operating as an extension of the SeaKeepers Asia Chapter.
